Came across this last night:
>RENOUNCE YOUR U.S. CITIZENSHIP
You will no longer be an American citizen if you voluntarily give up (renounce) your U.S. citizenship.
Giving up your U.S. citizenship has consequences. You should never make this decision lightly, as it can only be undone under very limited circumstances. Renouncing your U.S. citizenship means that you:
-Give up your rights and responsibilities as a U.S. citizen.
-Must become a citizen of another nation, or risk becoming "stateless".
-May need a visa to visit the United States.
>Contact the U.S. Embassy or consulate in the country where you intend to live to renounce your U.S. citizenship.

City authorities are yet to launch any effort to regain the small commune for the United States, instead opting to cave to the political fantasies petulant, ridiculous upper-class activists.

Thought parts of this backroom discussion might be useful here, fwiw. Just a muse,yet, something I can't help seeing:
> i am not sure what makes me sadder: that they want to destroy it, or that they know not what they had.
Since 2016, I have developed the opinion that their entire lives have been co-opted by something so dark, the only way for those who are 'awake' enough to recognize SOMETHING IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE still, unfortunately, are sooo very co-opted, they've easily fallen prey to the 96% media highjacking that set all this in motion in the first place.
(something like that)
>It's their Catch-22, in that they 'see', yet, cannot look in the right direction. Their sense of personal responsibility is heightened enough that they feel empowered to 'lead the way', but the path they've chosen was NOT their choosing; it was chosen for them in insidious ways, even before they were born.
They are total tools of The Dark Side, unwitting soldiers in the destruction of all that is/was sacred, yet, remain under the impression that being a SJW is a calling that is honorable.
>they are empowered by the very thing that aims to destroy all they hold dear...including themselves.
One look at RAZ transforming into a nightmare right before their eyes might wind up becoming a benefit to those who first watched with eager anticipation, then quickly realizing SOMETHING IS WRONG WITH THIS PICTURE, ALSO.
>Circular logistics, poised to destroy the destroyers in the end.
I cannot help feeling sadness for the psyche they have been born into. It was not their choosing. They are missing out on all the beauty which still remains, blinded by the plight.
>as I said, a muse fwiw. one that wrenches my soul.

When my son was about 14, for a good year or so he decided to go vegatarian, borderlining on vegan.
He wanted onions milk and tofu. I told him if you want manboobs and feminine affinities, be my guest, but I'm not feeding you that.
I found other ways. Unfortunately, so did he on the sly.
Well, long story short...he finally gets a gf, and realizes he's getting, um, a bit puffy in the chest.
From that day foward he was back on an orgnic diet, filled with meat and other healthy goodies.
Today he works for Homeland Security as a TSA Supervisor.
Onions is not a man's friend.
